

ECI 647
Online Learning
Fall Semester, 2002

John Hollenbeck, Ph.D.
Instructional Technology and Design
Darden College of Education Rm. 165-2
Norfolk, VA 23529-0161
(757) 683-3850
jhollenb@odu.edu

Learning Contract

Student Name _____ Student ID _____

Email address _____ Phone Number _____

Class Standing _____ Major _____

General Items

Plan

Please give a brief description of your goals for your education and profession. Why are you studying in this department? How will it help further your professional/life ambitions?

This Course

How does this course fit in with your plan?

Objectives

What do you want to be able to to/know at the end of this semester?

Course Specific Items

Basic Course Parameters

This course asks you to examine three areas of online learning: 1) is an introduction and basic examination of the medium, 2) concentrates upon skills needed to facilitate online learning and 3) deals with designing an online learning environment. Please have your projects reflect each of these three general goals.

Projects

After reviewing the syllabus, please list project ideas that you would like to explore during this semester.

What support do you expect?

This contract is a two-way agreement. What do you expect from Dr. Hollenbeck, the ID&T program and Old Dominion University?

How should you be evaluated?

What methods of evaluation would you prefer. Should we work together, or should grading be entirely up to the discretion of the instructor? What role, if any, should your peers play?

Evaluation events

This course is different from most college courses in that it is not based upon weekly events. Still, it undoubtedly would be helpful for you to develop a schedule of due dates for your work. If desired, include that here:

Conditions

This agreement may be revised at any time during the semester, subject to agreement by both parties. This agreement binds both signatories to the conditions agreed upon within the document.

Signed

Student

John Hollenbeck, Ph.D.

This contract should be returned to Dr. Hollenbeck by the second week of class.